
by WolframAlpha. Mathematica 8.0.4 WolframAlpha 8.0 If anyone has any idea why this might be happening, please let me know. A: You should take into account that the standard definition of the Logarithm is $\text{Log}[z] = \int_0^{\infty} \frac{e^{-t}}{t+z} dt$, where $z=e^{-t}$. While Wolfram Alpha uses the principal branch of the logarithm, which assumes $z>0$, Mathematica uses the de Bruijn-like principal branch of the logarithm and assumes $z \in \mathbb{C}$. They are both right, but, according to Wolfram Alpha standard convention, they are more or less half-right. For example, $\text{Log}[x] = \int_0^{\infty} \frac{1}{t+x} dt$ and Mathematica uses $\int_0^{\infty} \frac{1}{t+x} dt$ for the (principal branch of the) logarithm. He's really good at it. He's got our hockey bags closed just in the correct spot. He's good at making sure he gets all the hockey equipment out. What's great is he's going to be retired for a long time." Backstrom was raised in Kamloops, B.C., where he played a major role in the success of both a Bantam and a Midget championship teams. He is working with the Kamloops Blazers, the Kings' AHL affiliate. "He's just a great kid," Johnston said. "He's got great leadership qualities. He's just a great person." The Oilers drafted Backstrom with the sixth pick in the first round (No. 21 82138339de
